

1. Construction

- During the Construction phase, I worked on the actual development of Transit Pay. This involved writing code for the application, testing the different features and functionalities, and researching the topic to ensure the final product met the necessary standards.

However, I faced challenges while developing the project's Backend, and I took help from my sister, who had expertise in this area. I took help to do the Backend with my sister, which was the most challenging part for me in this project.

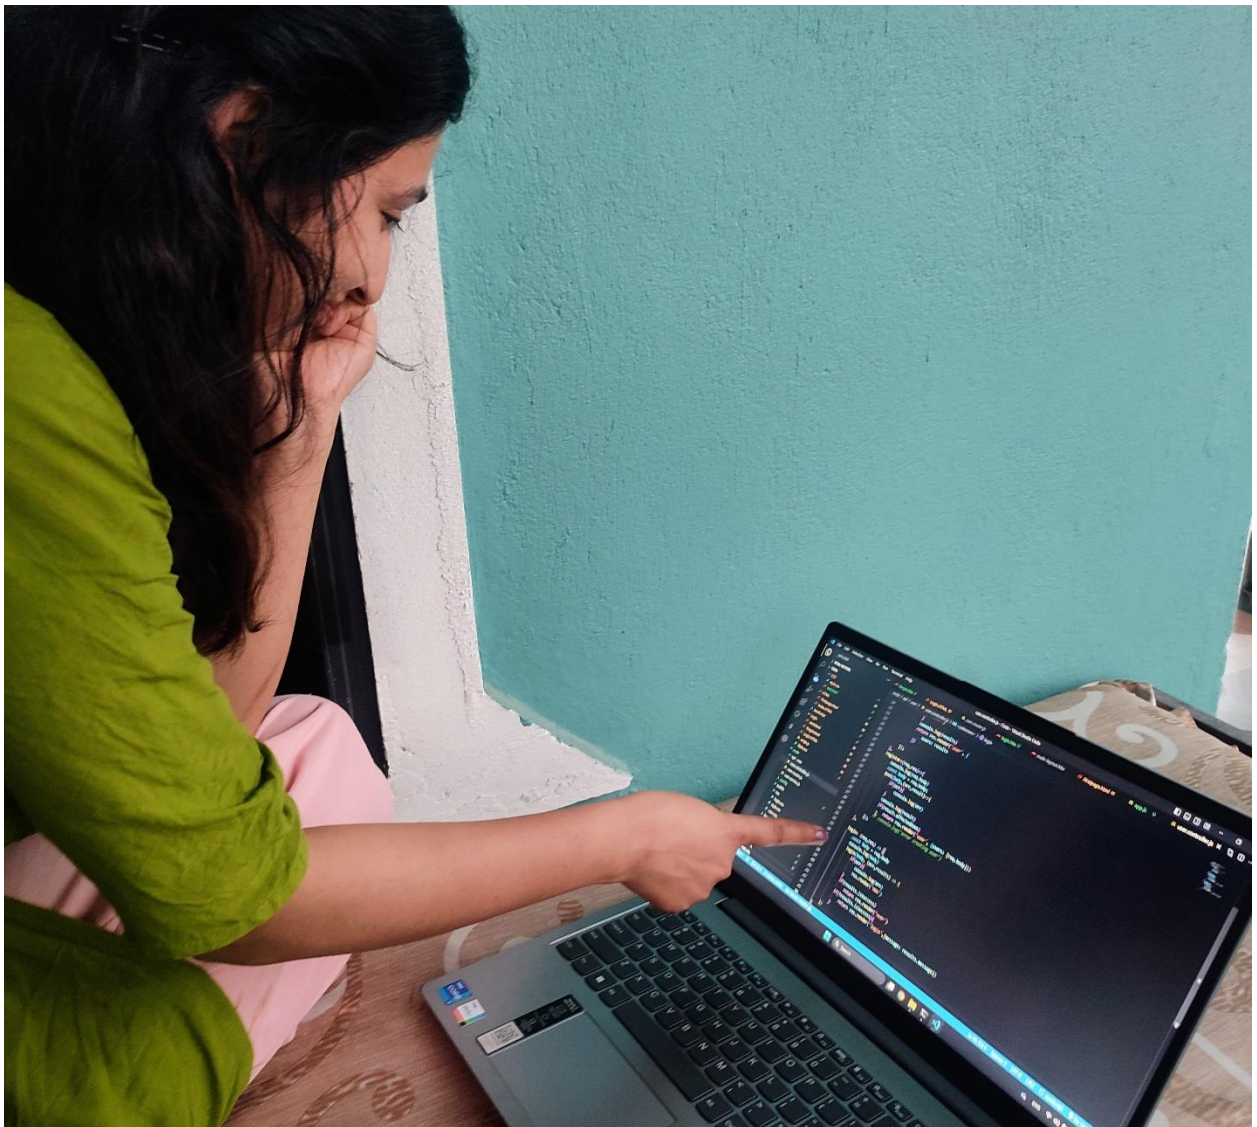

Figure 1 Image of Sister teaching me Backend

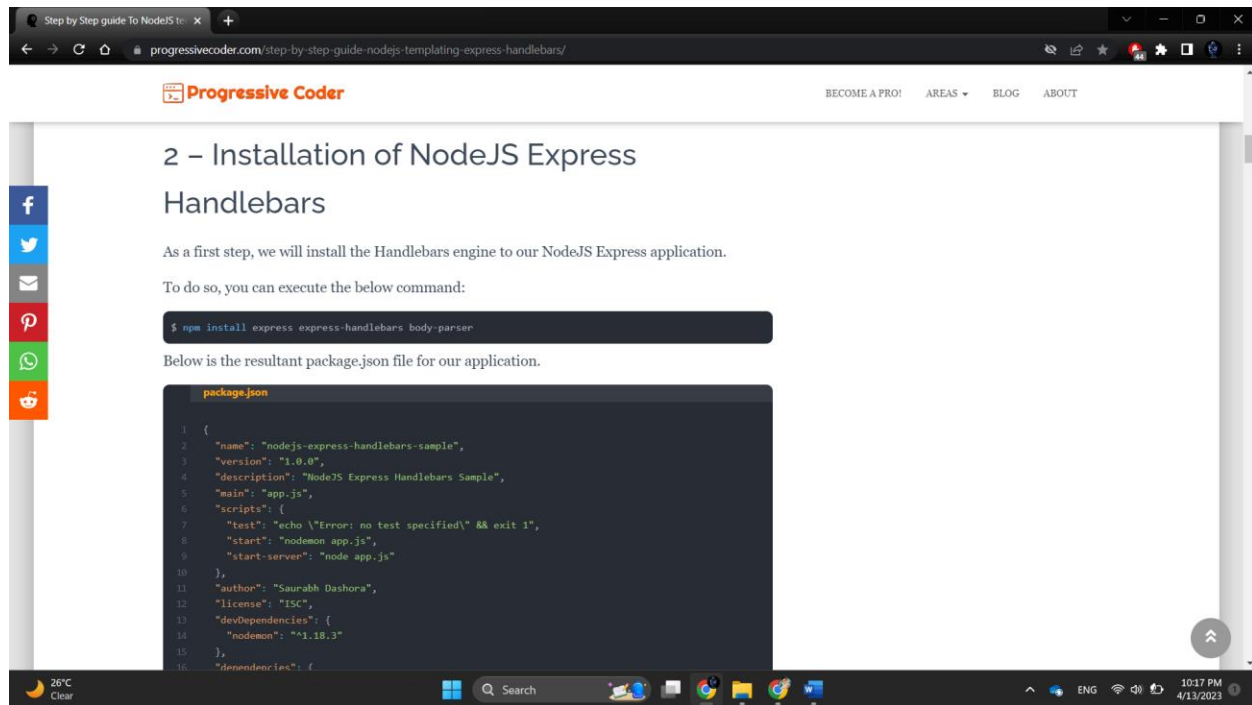

Figure 2 Screenshot of the website where I take reference doing Backend